

Abingdon Hydro

News about the Abingdon Hydro project: at a meeting last night supporters of the hydro scheme were given the results of a research programme that has been carried out for them by Oxford University students. Local people and those from further afield were asked to indicate whether they would be likely to take part if a share issue took place to raise the capital for the scheme and the results were very positive. With the extraction licence from the Environment Agency now granted the project is gathering momentum.

The Partnership manager gave advice on the research methodology and facilitated the meeting, but the hydro project has its own board of directors and for further information go to their Abingdon Hydro facebook page.
